issue to provide nourishment.

Thirty-two-year old Ranil Laguna's family used to live in a rented house and subsist on his measly P200 weekly income as a banana farmer in barangay Bangkerohan Dos. His five children were all malnourished, with the youngest, 17-month old, Rafly, severely stunted, underweight and wasted.

At the start of the program, Rafly stood a mere 79 centimeters, or just over two feet, and weighed 7.7 kilograms.

"He could barely move and looked like as if he's a kind of a frog or something. I really pitied him," says a female employee of the provincial general services office who adopted the now Rafly, pretty 22-month-old.

QC plans housing ban in lots near fault line

By Julie M. Aurelio

TO AVERT further accidents and bigger threat to life and property in case of a strong earthquake, the Quezon City government is mulling the declaration of some areas along the West Valley Fault as nonresidential zones.

The city government has identified 394 lots in 24 subdivisions located within the five-meter buffer zone of the West Valley Fault System, formerly known as the Marikina Valley Fault, and included them in the city's electronic geographical mapping project.

City Mayor Herbert Bautista said the city government is considering declaring this buffer zone as nonresidential to avoid further damage in case of the ground rupturing during a strong earthquake.

Bautista said a possible move would be abandoning building structures, whether residential or commercial, located on or near the Valley Fault System.

"Concerned government agencies should have full coordination in efforts to lessen the impact of a possible movement of the fault since an earthquake hits the country," Bautista said.

Recreational areas

The areas within the buffer zone could be declared as open parks or educational areas where science-related professionals could master their specializations, the mayor added.

The proposal came after Subdivision Administration Unit chief architect Pedro Rodriguez Jr. reported at an executive staff meeting that the Information Technology Development Office had included the Valley Fault System into the proposed e-Geographical Information System.

Rodriguez said the Philippine Institute of Volcanology and Seismology (Phivolcs) had already informed the property owners of the 394 lots about the Valley Fault System and the buffer zone. He did not name the subdivisions where the particular lots are located.

The Phivolcs had earlier said there is no likelihood that rupturing of the ground beyond the buffer zone would occur and that this would pose no problem to areas beyond the five-meter area.

Educational zone

Bautista said the proposed educational zone would allow urban planners, geodetic engineers and other science-related professionals or students to study or master their own specializations.

Meanwhile, Rodriguez suggested that the buffer zone be included in the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan and that the Phivolcs issue a corresponding clearance prior to the city government's issuance of a locational clearance to areas on or near the Valley Fault System.

He also recommended the installation of physical markers at the actual locations of the fault line in coordination with the Phivolcs.

How to Choose the Right Financing Scheme for your Dream Home

Property developers nowadays seem to offer a good deal by providing easy-to-own financing packages. However, a closer look at their financing schemes shows a program that is not as attractive as advertised. A lot of factors must be considered before you can finally say that a certain payment scheme is the best one for you. Among these factors are the equity or downpayment (DP), interest rates on the loanable amount, inclusive projects, move-in schedule in relation to payments made, and the credibility of company providing the scheme.

The usual DP scheme offered in the market is 20 % of the total contract price (TCP) spread over 12 months. Other developers spread the DP over 24 months, termed as "stretched downpayment". The idea behind stretching the DP is to make the monthly equity payment as low as possible so that it is more affordable to consumers.

To reduce the amount of equity payments even further, property developers came up with innovative financing schemes, such as 5% or even 0% DP. At first glance, you may think that the "lower" the DP is, the better. However, you must be wary of sudden balloon payments and hidden charges that are added on the monthly amortization (or the payments to be made after the DP stage) that simply repackage the standard 20% DP scheme.

After the completion of DP, you have to check on the interest rates available for the loanable amount. Most property developers today offer either in-house or bank financing, the latter being pushed more because of the lower monthly amortization that it entails for the buyers. However, interest rates for bank loans must be checked as well. Interest rates fluctuate and usually move upward. Rather than "low interest rates", what you have to ensure, more importantly, is that the interest rate for your loan is locked-in. This safeguards you from any sudden changes in the interest rate.

You must also consider the coverage of the financing scheme offered by the developers. Some developers grant the scheme only to projects that fall within a certain price range. Thus, you may not actually enjoy your dream home if it is below or above a stipulated price bracket.

Apart from the financing scheme, however, the ease of moving in must also be considered. The rule is, the earlier the move-in schedule, the better. For units that are still for construction, most developers turn over the unit for move-in after the completion of DP. For some developers, move-in is scheduled while the buyer is still in the DP stage. Go for the option that best suits your needs.

Finally, always avail from dependable and trustworthy property developers. Availing your dream home from property developers guarantees that you are in good hands. An example of a property developer that offers an innovative financing scheme in the market today is PRO-FRIENDS. PRO-FRIENDS is a reliable and trusted property developer that has been in the industry for more than a decade now. PRO-FRIENDS currently offers its friendliest bank financing scheme – 10% DP term, with no balloon payments, no hidden charges, and with move-in after 12 months, for units that are still for construction. For ready for occupancy units, the 10% DP is payable in six months and the move-in is scheduled on the seventh month.

PRO-FRIENDS is committed to making the dreams of Filipinos of owning their dream homes much easier by offering this honest to goodness deal. A Php 1.09 million house and lot in Lancaster Estates in Imus, Cavite, for example, only costs Php 9,057/month for 12 months during the DP stage, and Php 9,474/month for 20 years during the amortization stage.

This special financing scheme, which runs from March 1 to June 30, 2011, is available in select PRO-FRIENDS properties regardless of the price. Within this period, the interest rate for the bank loan is locked in at 10%, so you are assured of a truly worry-free purchase within the specified period.

You've worked hard for years to realize your dream of having your own home. Let PRO-FRIENDS help you in realizing this dream. To learn more about PRO-FRIENDS and its innovative financing scheme, call (02) 491-7700 (Manila Hotline) or (033) 338-3656 (Iloilo Hotline). You may also visit www.profriends.com.

Ah, the poverty of affluence

By Margie David Collins
Contributor

WITH your loved ones a safe distance away, what would you risk your life to retrieve from your burning house? Title deeds to your house; bank accounts and insurance files; cash and jewelry? Albums of photos taken in happier, younger days? A beautifully imperfect vase your child sculpted with his tiny hands for Mother's Day when he was five?

I don't know what to save. But as the killer tsunami devastated whole cities, towns and villages in northeastern Japan with horrifying velocity right before our eyes, the power of nature once reminded of how small we are, of the fragility and transitoriness of life. And oddly, a reminder, too, of my rampant acquisitiveness in an unconsciously capitalist culture.

Incorrigible hoarding

I have collected things before now—exquisite fountain pens, Mulberry "B" bags, Bordeaux and Burgundy wines, which may be worth a small fortune one day.

I hoard incorrigibly: canned food, bottled water, bolts of fabric, candles, anything and everything I couldn't part with. Who knows when you might need them?

Bookstores sing their siren songs to me, and I go in and buy at least three books at any one time. Consequently, I now have more books than I can read in my lifetime.

I'm a cheerful sucker for "3 for 2" promos, idly forgetting that the space in my house does not expand to allow for my whims.

I cannot walk past a delicatessen without buying Italian sun-dried tomatoes, Provençal tapenade, or marinated Greek olives which lie in the fridge until, past their sell-by date, I throw them out unseen.

I have enough china, crystal and champagne flutes for a small wedding party; bed linen to keep at least three families comfy in duvets and pillowcases; scarves in all the colors God made; cashmere knitwear to wear in winter, in fall, spring... and summer. Unopened CDs. Shoes in pristine boxes. I am drowning in and choking on stuff.

"In early youth," wrote Schopenhauer, "as we contemplate our coming life, we are like children in a theater before the curtain is raised, sitting there in high spirits and eagerly waiting for the play to begin. It is a blessing that we do not know what is really going to happen."

Like pagan offerings to appease angry gods, our possessions have come to define and identify us. The car we drive, our cell phones, what we wear, the handbag bought at a price that would feed a family of four for weeks.

The author Jay McInerney said that New Yorkers—by which he means the habitués of the Upper East Side—judge other New Yorkers by the watches and shoes they wear on weekends. The irony is only the truly rich can afford to dress—and look—so cheaply.

Narcotic luxury

We have allowed ourselves to be seduced and narcotized by ads, to consume and then throw away ever more stuff. Self-anointed mavens advise us about what stuff they think we need and don't need. The cost of owning all this stuff is usually the price of losing them. It can get you into a tight old tether wanting the next new thing, for it is always one purchase short of happiness.

And because, some days, you can feel

AH, THE POVERTY/C2

Ah, the poverty of affluence

This mad desire to acquire–when the must-haves become to-die-for–is so utterly exhausting. We're always one purchase short of happiness
